

Enzo Traverso: About the complexity of the past

Friday 28 December 2018, by TRAVERSO Enzo (Date first published: 28 December 2018).

The historian Enzo Traverso, a professor at the Cornell University (USA), is one of the most distinguished specialists in memory studies. In this interview he answers a series of questions focusing on the memory of the perpetrators and their legacies, the current rise of new far-right movements and the situation of the European policies of memory. He also refers to his latest books, Left-wing melancholia. Marxism, History, and Memory (Columbia University Press, 2017) and Les nouveaux visages du fascisme (Editions Textuel, 2017).
